head above the azure water of the and 3 children. South Seas may prove the subject of international complications if the appeal partment at Washington can move the German Government that the missionhave ordered him to leave his home on the coral island of Ruk in the Caroline group. He refuses to be dispossessed and he has sought the aid of this Government.

Captain O. Anderson of the missionesterday from the Caroline Islands.

For many years Schnelling has been virtually a king in the cocoanut groves of the little island. He has pursued his missionary work among the natives with such good results that he now owns the entire island, with its palms and pearls and corals. His power and rights have been undisputed up to the present time, and yearly he collected The natives worked for him and were satisfied with their master.

And now the Germans want the island along with the rest of the Caroline group, and Schnelling has been ordered to go. Schnelling states that he will only leave when compelled to and threatens to resist with armed force any efforts to remove him. Captain the attempts of the German government to remove Schnelling from Ruk.

"Schnelling is a missionary who has He boarded my vessel when we called at the island, and gave me the letter that I now have, and which I shall send on to Washington. According to Schnelling's story he own, the island, having purchased it from the natives. The German traders have been trying to force him to leave, and finally the German Government ordered him to go. He remained on the island, however, and states that he will remain there until he gets word from Washington." The schooner Vine is sixty-seven days from Ponape, and since leaving here many months ago has visited the S. S. Nevadan, from Tacoma...Oct. 6 islands of the Caroline, Marshall and Gilbert groups. Twice during the voyage the vessel was ashore on the coral reefs, but both times she escaped with little damage. The Vine was chartered by the American Board of Foreign Missions, and on board were three mis- SIX-ROOM cottage at 1383 Beretania sionaries who have been in the South Sea islands for the past seven years. They were the Rev. Mr. Mahihila and > Charles Bahker, the second mate of the schooner, died on the voyage and was buried in the Gilbert Islands. The Vine brings the news of a strike among the native copra pickers of the Mara day, and at the time of the departure of the schooner the German traders were trying to starve them into sub-
